

THIRTIETH YEAR

LANCASTER, KY., THURSDAY AFTERNOON, SEPTEMBER 18, 1919.

NUMBER 25.

Cracks At Creation.

The surest way of becoming light hearted, sister, is to quit being heavy hearted.

Every man wears the pants in his own home, but it is what his wife says that goes.

The man who is eternally in debt is generally a great spendthrift—with other people's money.

Some people do not believe in tooting their own horns, but are even more averse to having them remain untattooed.

All men are born equal, yes. But that is probably because profiteering does not interest them at the time of their first squawk.

A former American in Canada thinks the United States made a poor showing in the war. But he only thinks—he hasn't brains enough to know.

"A little money is a dangerous thing," says an exchange. Of course. It is just another temptation in the path of the innocent profiteer.

Cupid, we admit, is the god of love. But these are the days when the little devil flits around with a dart in one hand and a pocketbook in the other.

The Kaiser went up like a rocket, soared like an eagle, and came down like a chunk of mud—flattened out beyond all possibility of future mischief.

While discussing the anarchy that prevails in Mexico, let us forget the same brand that is rearing its head in our own country. House cleaning at home is a good policy at times.

The profiteer is on the down grade. Man the side lines and sweat him in the arctic regions as he rushes by. No greater sport could be afforded the American consumer today.

The young lady who recently remained away from a party because she "simply didn't have a thing to wear," quite overlooked the fact that she would have been the observed of all observers.

American ministers are about the poorest paid class of men in the country. We suggest, however, that their salaries might be materially enhanced by putting a tax on snoring in church.

The oldest person in the world has been located. He is John Shell, of Kentucky. Shell has 121 years to his credit, is hale and hearty, and says he never ate, drank or used tobacco to excess. It is needless to remark, however, that he was never the editor of a country newspaper.

Bolshevism has spread its red wings very generally over Europe, and is even invading this country to a dangerous degree. The man who can not respect the American flag and American institutions should be conducted to the border line and kicked across.

The Prince of Wales is rather a democratic youngster for one who was born with a crown dangling before his eyes. An American wife would cement his reputation for horse sense and install a few additional brains in the British royal beehive of the future.

Twenty-six per cent of the men mobilized by France were lost in the war. The injection of American blood in the repopulation of the country would do much toward raising France again to the proud position of eminence it once occupied in the community of nations.

The king and queen of England are encouraging royal princesses to marry commoners, there being not sufficient royal males to go around. But possibly their majesties are far seeing, and are providing a bulwark among the common people against the day when the throne begins to wobble.

Our philosopher says: Farm implements are going to be as high as a cat's back next year, so put a coat of paint on those that can be made to last through another season.

Our store will be closed Thursday Sept. 25th 1918, on account of a Jewish Holiday.

W. J. Poteet Succumbs.

Mr. W. J. Poteet, known to his many friends as "Billy" Poteet, died at his home at Harrodsburg Sunday, Sept. 15. He had been in poor health for some time. For several years he had been a deputy in the collector's office at Danville and prior to that was county clerk of Mercer for a long time. Mr. Poteet was a distant relative to the Huffmans formerly of this county and was a fine gentleman. His widow and two children, Edward Poteet, of New York, and Mrs. Mary McDonald of Philadelphia, survive.

Sad Death of Baby Girl

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Arnold have the sincere sympathy of their many friends in the death of their baby girl, Burdenus Frances, which occurred at the Good Samaritan hospital last Wednesday.

The circumstances of the death is peculiarly sad and distressing, and the griefed parents are naturally heart broken. The child was only twenty months old and while playing last week on the floor of the home became choked and a bean was removed from its throat and for a few hours seemed to be relieved, but later in the day the little one showed evidence of choking and difficult breathing and was hurried by local physicians to the Good Samaritan Hospital at Lexington where an operation was performed by Dr. J. A. Stucky, which gave apparently no relief and death relieved its suffering a few hours later.

Revival Meeting.

A series of special evangelistic services will begin at the Lancaster Baptist Church Sunday evening, Sept. 21st, provided the evangelist does not have bad luck in his trip across the country. Should he fail to get here for the Sunday evening service, he will without failure be in Lancaster for the Monday evening service. These special services will be in charge of Rev. C. Oscar Johnson, who has labored extensively in Tennessee, Kentucky and California. Rev. Johnson is a preacher of ability, an entertainer of merit and possesses a voice of unusual power and melody. He is beyond doubt one of the most congenial and one of the finest spirited men I have ever known. His messages will not appeal to Baptists only, but will appeal to every one who hear him, regardless of denomination.

We invite everyone to come and urge you to do so, if possible. Beginning Sunday night at the Baptist Church there will be services every night at 8 o'clock, for ten days or two weeks. Make arrangements not to be present one night, but every night.

C. D. Strother, Pastor.

How Strange Things Sometimes Happen.

"I want to write you to let you know that I have taken 2 more doses of May's Wonderful Remedy, and have gained 10 lbs in the last two weeks, although I am thinner around the waist line than before, because the bloating in my stomach has all gone and I am feeling like a boy again. There never was anything in this world half as good as this medicine." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. R. E. McROBERTS, Druggist, Lancaster, Ky.

Shortage of Freight Cars.

The following statement was authorized last week by the Regional Director's office, Southern Region, United States Railroad Administration:

"Another shortage of freight cars is in prospect for the coming fall and winter. Instead of the surplus of equipment to be found, on nearly all railroads during the dull days before the after-the-war business revival set in, every piece of equipment now is in use on many lines and only the most careful handling by the railroads with consistent and whole-hearted co-operation from the shipping public can prevent serious interference with business.

Federal Managers have been called upon by the Railroad Administration to utilize equipment in the fullest possible extent, and particularly to see that cars are set in motion promptly upon being loaded or unloaded.

Shippers are asked to bend a hand both by reducing detention of cars to a minimum and by careful and heavy loading so that the greatest possible service may be had from each car. From a purely selfish business standpoint, of course, it is to the interest of the individual shipper and receiver of freight to do his part toward minimizing the effects of a car shortage from which he will suffer along with the public generally."

PREVENTINGPYORRHEA.

For years the dental profession has been content to clean teeth in a haphazard sort of way and has overlooked the fact that the conditions in the mouth are directly responsible for future pyorrhea.

The public has been led to believe that cleaning the teeth was merely done for the sake of appearance, and that brushing them with a little pumice is all that is necessary.

It is to be regretted that the most important, if not the most skillful operation in dentistry should be slighted in such a manner.

The awakening of the medical and dental professions to the full significance of the great number of systematic diseases resulting from pyorrhea has instituted a new epoch in dental science.

As a result of this awakening, the real predisposing causes of diseases are given the most thorough investigation. It is conceded that micro-organisms play a most important part in disease, and as far back as 1890 Miller isolated more than fifty kinds of micro-organisms from the juices and deposits of the mouth.

The streptococcus and staphylococcus are always permanent residents, and the pneumococcus is found in 90 per cent of the mouths of persons examined. Other germs are so frequently present as guests that to find them is not at all surprising.

These micro-organisms may live with us for years without doing us any apparent harm. They live on particles of food, cast-off epithelial cells, etc., but at any time the pneumococcus, for instance, may become the causative factor in pneumonia, and they may all take part in producing tuberculosis of the lungs. The streptococcus is one of the important factors in rheumatism, erysipelas, sore throat, blood poisoning and many other afflictions.

The generally recognized fact that infections from the teeth and tonsil cause most all of the diseases of the heart, and are responsible for a large per cent of the inflammation of the eye and diseases of the kidneys, makes it incumbent on the public to awaken to the importance of the care of the mouth.

IT IS JUST AS NECESSARY TO HEALTH TO HAVE THE MOUTH THOROUGHLY CLEANED SEVERAL TIMES EACH YEAR, AND TO BRUSH THE TEETH AT LEAST TWICE EACH DAY AS IT IS TO BATHE AND WEAR CLEAN CLOTHES. CLEANLINESS IS THE BEST PREVENTIVE OF DISEASE THAT IS KNOWN.

The cure of pyorrhea to be most effective must be started when the disease is in its earliest stages. Every individual should learn to examine his own teeth every two or three weeks. Start with one of the last back teeth and examine them in rotation, and also examine the gums surrounding them. When you notice that the gums bleed while brushing them, that the gums have a reddish or purplish color or that there are slight deposits of tartar, it is time to have the teeth carefully cleaned by a dentist, for these are symptoms which, if neglected, lead to pyorrhea.

Some of the greatest causes of pyorrhea that are frequently overlooked are ill-fitting crowns and bridges, poor contact points and overhanging margins of fillings, and cavities in the teeth where food can be packed against the gum between the teeth while eating.

Just remember that pyorrhea is never found in a clean mouth. It is also true that many persons have pyorrhea who conscientiously brush their teeth. Brushing alone will not always prevent pyorrhea. The services of a dentist who understands oral hygiene are required in order to prevent it.

Another thing to remember is that the dentist can do little without the earnest co-operation of the patient. Everlasting vigilance is the price of good teeth and a clean healthy mouth, but the trouble is worth while.

Pyorrhea breeds germs which carry disease through the system.

Pyorrhea does not cause pain, but it does cause the loss of the teeth and undermines the health.

Watch your teeth and prevent trouble by keeping the teeth clean.

DR. M. S. HATFIELD.
